APPOINTMENT AND NOMINATION PROCESS

As a member of Congress, I am afforded the greatest opportunity to nominate young men and women for an appointment to a U.S. Service Academy. Generally, at least one qualified applicant will receive an appointment to each of the academies. Qualifications are based on the whole-person evaluation i.e., character, scholarship, leadership, physical aptitude, medical fitness, goals and motivation.

Since competition for an appointment is so keen, scholastic achievement has been very high in recent years. Class rank in the top 25% is not uncommon among appointees to the service academies.

Remember, it is your responsibility to ensure that all requisite forms are completed and all remaining paperwork provided in a timely manner.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT) scores are required of all nominees and repeated if desired in order to achieve a higher score. Nominees financially unable to take the College Board exams can do so free of charge with verification of need from the appropriate high school official. Check the appropriate box on the application whereby a copy of the results will be sent directly to this office.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION ACADEMIES

U.S. MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY:

Nomination for appointment to the Merchant Marine Academy differs slightly from those of the Department of Defense Academies. Qualifications are generally similar whereby the Merchant Marine Academy will accept the nomination of an individual who is 25 years old by June 15th of the entry year into the Academy.

Candidates should be in the top 40% of their class to be competitive for appointment.

U.S. COAST GUARD ACADEMY:

The U.S. Coast Guard Academy is the only one of the Armed Forces service academies that offers appointments solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition; there are no congressional appointments. Visit the application process page for the U.S. Coast Guard Academy <https://www.uscga.edu/apply/> for more information and review the requirements. You can also write to them at:

MILITARY ACADEMIES OFFER A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY-NOMINATIONS

The military academies desire a geographical distribution of cadets and midshipmen. This is achieved through the congressional nomination and appointment process which assigns a certain number of vacancies at each academy to each Congressional District depending upon graduations or separations (attrition). As the representative of the 3rd District, I am allowed to place a maximum of five students at each academy which covers all four grade levels.

The application process to a military academy begins (in high school) in the spring of your junior year or the fall of your senior year. At the time, students may contact my office by letter or telephone expressing their interest in a specific academy. Detailed instructions will be given and prepared packet mailed at that time. The law states that candidates only apply through the congressional office which represents their legal residence. They may apply for more or all than one academy simultaneously. Since the Coast Guard Academy does not fall under these guidelines, the candidates apply directly.

All required materials, i.e., three letters of recommendation, ACT/SAT scores (check proper code # for a copy forwarded to my office), transcripts, your photo, a short essay and other requirements identified to you in my packet, must be submitted by the deadline date of November 25, 2019 to one of my district offices. In the packet, I will provide the names and addresses of the Vice President and your two U.S. Senator offices if you choose to ask for a nomination from them also. You should contact the academy of your choice directly via the internet or e-mail to open a file with them. Subsequently, the Academy will then begin their application process. What you submit to my office stays at my office for my records.

In December, I review all application files making my selection based on criteria such as grades, extra-curricular activities, ACT/SAT scores, etc. A slate of ten nominations per vacancy may be submitted, however, it is important to note that the final decision is entirely the responsibility of the academy officials. Individuals whose educational background is inadequate for immediate entrance are considered for admission into the Prep School, which is located on or nearby the Academy grounds. This 10-month period improves but not guarantees the chance for appointment as a cadet.

Upon receipt of my slate of nominees, the academies begin their final evaluation process that comprise of a medical exam, a possible interview with a local Admissions Officer and a fitness test which includes minimum requirements for push-ups, etc. Based on these results, the academies select one or more candidates who are best suited for the rigors of military life and challenging academics and are then offered an appointment. Candidates who are well-balanced in athletics, academics and extra-curricular activities are the strongest candidates. I have found many applicants were surprised to learn that, even though they are straight “A” students yet never participated in any athletics, they are likely to be rejected. Sports are compulsory and physical fitness a prerequisite for all academies.

Normally from March through May, I am notified of the nominees that have been selected for appointment. The academies are required to select at least one of my slates of ten nominees and often choose more. After the nominee has accepted the offer of appointment, they are to report to their selected academy in July. When a candidate receives appointments to more than one academy, careful evaluation must be considered prior to a selection.

As newly appointed cadets and midshipmen report to their respective academy, they will begin an intensive eight-week basic training which includes physical conditioning and military orientation. This training is designed to give them “the necessary foundation to complete four difficult and challenging years of character development.” An 18 year-old who has mastered high school must be ready to start at the very bottom again. A shaved head, a “doolie” uniform, and an impossible schedule of duties reduce everyone to the same level. The academy then helps them build confidence, unquestioned integrity and exemplary leadership skills.

Those not selected, may reapply the following year. It is advised that they attend college for that one year and strengthen their math and science skills. To qualify, a student must be at least 17 years old by July 1st but not have passed their 22nd birthday on July 1 of their entrance year. They students also may not be married or supporting any children or parents.

The quality of education at these academies is one of the best in the nation, training them for a career as officers in the military, and leaving with a rank and a guaranteed profession. They must, however, remain six years or more in the military, depending upon their career choice.

In addition, each summer the academy hosts two identical one-week Summer Scientific Seminar to highly qualified Junior's which provides a first-hand look at the academic program and facilities. Applications must be submitted by mid-February and all expenses incurred by the student. A limited amount of financial assistance is available.

In conclusion, the rigorous disciplined training and well-rounded program is designed to excel, lead and teach the cadets and midshipmen how to overcome stress, fatigue and physical exhaustion - most of all, how to interact and reach people, and how to touch the spirit of the soldiers by demonstrating leadership abilities and a sense of duty. Hopefully, this brief summary will give some insight into the very selective process being applied at all academies.
